TEMPERANCE.—The gospel temperance meeting at Parker Hall yesterday afternoon was as is usual a very interesting one, and productive of good results. E. G. Oracraft and Rev. T. B. Hughes delivered very earnest addresses. The popular choirnever did better, and every body seemed delighted. Twelve young men signed the pledge. It is evident that a more commodious hall is needed for securing greater success and more general co-operation in the temperance work, and the securing of Washington Hall for that purpose should receive the endorsement of our citizens in the shape of liberal contributions. Pulpir Points.—Rev. Samuel B, Barnitz returned Saturday from a week's preaching along the Valley Branch of the B. & O. road, and occupied the pulpit of his own church—Sixteenth Street Lutheran—yesterday. The morning sermon was based on Psaim $5:8, "I will hear what God the Lord will speak." The Sunday School lesson on "The false and the true" was beautifully illustrated in crayon and practically enforced by an address from the pastor. The music was really thrilling, led by organ and cornet, E. W. Dunaway presiding at the former and Theodore Roller handling the latter instrument. The evening discourse was preached to a full chorus from the text. "Behold now is the accepted time; behold now is the day of salvation." This church will observe the week before Easter with special services, beginning next Sunday, and will changing rule No. 1, for the soverment of the changing rule No. 1, for the soverment of the changing rule No. 1, for the soverment of the changing rule No. 1, for the ch seem they are better adapted than to legislate in the interests of the inspection changing rule No. 1, for the government o pilots on our western and southern rivers as to require in case of meeting the de sending steamer to signal first. This rule is to be final, and when approved by sending steamer to signal first. This rule is to be final, and when approved by the Secretary of the Treasury becomes binding on and after the first day of July next, a sufficient time it is claimed to familiarize those who may be so unfortunate as to be entrusted with its execution. Herein is just where contusion and probably disaster is apprehended. To illustrate, how many in their business transactions it would be hard to tell, who on the first day of January, 1880, wrote and continued to do so 1879, although accustomed to observe the same for one year only. How much more difficult to abandon a rule that has been observed a life time. It should be borne in mind the present custom is almostas old as steamboating itself, the bell being first used to donate sides, and which was allenced only by the introduction of the steamwhistle. This then being the oldest and one of the most important features of the steamboat law, the proposed change has very justly produced widespread discontent and alarm, meeting with almost universal opposition from pilots and practical steamboatmen. It does, indeed, seem not a little strange that it has been reserved for the present Board of Supervising Inspectors, presided over by a former New York Custom House official, and a majority of whom are entirely unknown to western navigation, to make the discovery in this year of our Lord 1830, that to promote the efficiency of the service this most important rule must be reversed.

What considerations influenced the Board I am not advised. The first and only defense of the change, so far as my observation extends, comes from the pen of Colonel Merrell, of Cincinnati, a gentleman who stands high in his profession, but who, it is fair to presume, knows just as little of the practical operations of the rule as the rule knows about him, claims that by adopting the change no occasion for misunderstanding or crossing of signals can exist, and to which, if he is reported correctly, attributes 50 per cent of all the collisions that have occurred on ported correctly, attributes 50 per cent of all the collisions that have occurred on our western waters. The Colonel would lead one not familiar with the system of navi-

one not familiar with the system of navigation to infer that collisions were frequent, when in fact they but seldom occur, and originate mainly from causes entirely different from that ascribed. I affirm that under rule No. 1, if all its provisions are complied with, a collision is impossible. It provides that the signals shall be made, answered and understood by the time the vessels have neared within the prescribed distances of 800 wards. Here there is ample vessels have neared within the prescribed distance of 800 yards. Here there is applie provision for the signals to which the "Col." charges so much misobiel. If I am correctly informed, the necessity for changing signals rarely occurs. The provision for the signals to which the "Col." charges so much mischief. If I am correctly informed, the necessity for changing signals rarely occurs. The pilot who understands his business, knows that to the descending steamer belongs the channel. It never was intended to direct his course, since with heavy cargoes or tows it would be impossible to do so. Neither are the signals intended, nor are they used for this purpose, but simply to denote sides. Since then it is for the ascending steamer to do the gerrymandering or shifting, it would seem hut reasonable she should determine on which side she could pass most advantageously.

Having thus briefly presented what seems to me the right view of the subject, I will consider blunder No. 2, which for stupid stupidity and total disregard of the interests of those immediately concerned, is perhaps without a parallel in the annals of rule making, requiring applicants before receiving an original or ranewal of pilot's license, to undergo a rigid examination as to whether they can determine ollot's license, to undergo a rigid exam nation as to whether they can determin the colors used as signals on steamers. To what extent this defect prevails among pilots, I am not informed. Certain it is I have yet to hear of the first disaster resulting from this cause.

Since the signal lights used on our steam

Since the signal lights used on our steamers are universally recognized as indispensible to sale navigation, it follows that the ability of a pilot to readily discern and distinguish them from other lights, is equally indispensible. Under the operations of the rule thus far, but one has lost his equalty indispensible. Under the operations of the rule thus far, but one has lost his equation. One of Pittsburgh, Wheeling and Cincinnati's favorities, whose services were always in demand. Yet, it appears, if the test to which he was subjected is correct, his success did not depend on his ability to determine the color of signal lights. Just how far and under what circumstances their observance by pilots themselves is necessary. I am not informed. Certain it is, should the choice have to be made as between their continuance and pilots unable to discern them, the popular verdict would be, let the latter silde. Objection is made, not so much to this feature of the case as the methods adopted for its accomplishment. Subjecting applicants, a misority of whom reside adopted for its accomplishment. Subjecting applicants, a majority of whom reside hundreds of miles, more or less remote, from a hospital surgeon, to an expense which in many cases will exceed the present exorbitant license fee, and further subjecting packets thus deprived of their regular pilot while traveling over the country examining the different shades of stocking yarn, if unable to secure the services of another, to either lay up or run in violation of law, this will be the inevitable result, and suggests very forcibly why not empower the local boards to make the examination, using the signal lights instead of fabrics. It is suggested there may be a difference in being able to distinguish between the color of signals and the various hues that may exist in a promiscous pile of yarn.

To the initiated this all seems like the various hues that may exist in a promiscous pile of yarn.

To the initiated this all seems like "bosh," and while I boast of unimpaired vision, and can readily distinguish between calors, do not think I could see anything in the surgeon's batch of yarn but "red tape." Then hang up the signals and let the test be made at night and the pilot who cannot discern them will have no-body to blame but himself. Seriously speaking this is a serious matter, and is producing in steamboat circles a commotion which, if it does not disturb the foundations of society itself, will 'likely shake tion which, if it does not disturb the foun-dations of society itself, will-dikely shake the Board of Supervising Inspectors out of their boots. The sooner the better. Indeed the conviction is rapidly gaining ground that it has long outlived its use-fulness and should be abolished. It hangs an incubus upon the service, What the steamboat law now, and has needed for the last twenty-five or thirty vers, is rest. the last twenty-five or thirty years, is rest. This it can never have so long as a Board is required to meet every year to revise alter or amend. Looking back over the alter or amend. Looking back over the last few years, the impositions to which steamboats have had to submit through this instrumentality is amazing, forcing on them the most useless devices, such as "Evans' safety guards," lock-up safety valves, recording steam gauges, low water alarm indicators, &c., fit ornaments only for scrap piles, and now used as such for scrap piles, and now used as such after having wrenched from the steamboat nterest money enough to construct the nter-oceanic canal.

Money Matters-Weekly Trade Review there has been a steady and fair demand for money and other favors at the banks, and as the supply of the needful more than kept pace with the requirements all cus tomers found the market comfortable and easy at from 6a8 per cent per annum when they had the right kind of security to offer. The large stocks of breadstuffe and hog products in store here tie up a goodly percentage of capital in bank goodly percentage of capital in bank-vaults. The Chicago bank clearings for the present week foot up a total of $20,-563,996 10, being over $9,000,000 more than for the corresponding week last year. Trade in the city is good, and buyers in want of spring stocks are here making se-lections. Trade is increasing daily, and the line of deposits shows a steady increase. The flow of currency to and from the city has been fair.
